Message from the Principal

Masks Optional - Students and staff returned from February vacation to our new mask optional environment. It was nice to see students being kind, respectful, and supportive of each other as families and students made their own individual choices about masking. It was a great week, the weather cooperated so we were able to get outside most days and we are really looking forward to Spring time and getting rid of this cold, snowy weather (sorry all you ski lovers, I know that it's a sad time when ski season ends).

Talking with students about the Ukraine Russia War and supporting Ukrainian Refugees - Last week I sent out this letter with some resources on talking with your children about the Russia Ukraine war. If your child is impacted and struggling at school, please do not hesitate to reach out to me, your child's classroom teacher, or our School Psychologist, Mrs. O'Connell. I've had a number of students and families reach out asking how we can support the large number of Ukrainians fleeing Ukraine for Poland and other countries. There are many organizations collecting medical supplies and other items that are needed. Some local organizations have stated that they are currently overwhelmed with the number of items coming in, but will be looking for donations in the future, once they have the resources in place to organize and ship all of the items. In the coming weeks, I expect to work with students to have a drive for items that refugee children and families are seeking. Please stay tuned.

MJ & District News

MJ Welcoming School Committee (MJWSC) update -

The MJ WSC met again at the beginning of March to continue its work to ensure we are an inclusive, welcoming, anti-racist school community where every feels valued, respected, and a sense of belonging. The committee has a number of sub-committees that will focus on family events, parent workshops and information, and teacher workshops and knowledge building. The Committee hopes to get at least one or two initiatives rolled out before the end of this school year as well as develop a comprehensive plan for the upcoming school year. As part of the planning process the committee will be looking for feedback from the MJ community for parent workshops and family events so be on the lookout for an upcoming questionnaire/survey. In the meantime, please reach out to me if you have ideas or suggestions for the committee.

School Site Council Update -

The school site council recently met to review the district goals, the draft of the MJ School Improvement Plan, and discuss the FY 23 budget item requests that were discussed at the school committee meeting. Once the School Improvement Plan is finalized it will be shared with the school community.

Classroom Happenings

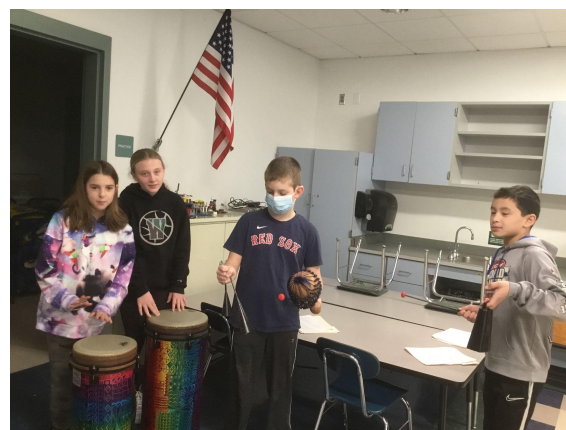

News from Music (Mrs. Saada-Smith)

5th Graders in Mrs. Saada-Smith's music class have been learning about rhythm. They began the unit, "How Does Music Unite Us" by drumming African rhythms together using many different percussion instruments in the music room such as djembes, gangkogui and shakeres. After they learned to play as an ensemble, the students learned an uplifting song, Sansa Kroma, a song often sung by children in Ghana that goes along with a stone passing game (which they played in small groups). The song is a reminder that the whole village is there to take care of them. This past week, the students put together a percussion ensemble, and created their own complementary rhythms, which they will perform for the class next week. Pictured are students from Mr. Parkhurst's Class, practicing their projects. Next we will begin learning some African Dance!

News from KL (Mrs. Layton)

This week during math, we played a game called Build It/Change It. Our math focused on adding to or subtracting from one quantity to make another quantity. Using the primary number cards, one card was flipped over and the number was built on a ten frame. Next, another card was flipped over. Students were encouraged to talk about their math thinking out loud. Did they have to add more to build the second number or did they have to subtract or take away, etc.? This game can easily be played at home by drawing your own ten frame, using a deck of playing cards and pennies!

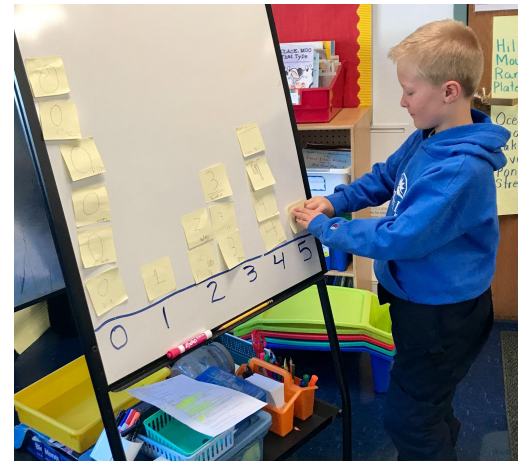

News from 2M (Ms. Mundy)

Second graders have started a new math unit about data. We learned that data is the facts or information we collect about people and things in our world. We have been busy posing questions, collecting and sorting information, and making representations of the data in order to share our findings with others.

In a recent lesson in Ms. Mundy's class, we posed the question: How many pockets are you wearing today? Students first used sticky notes to keep track of our numbers of pockets, and arranged them into a bar graph.

We also built cube towers to represent our number of pockets, and arranged the towers from smallest to largest. The students then used this data to create their own bar graphs. We learned that the range of pockets in our class was 0-5 and the mode (most common number) was zero pockets.

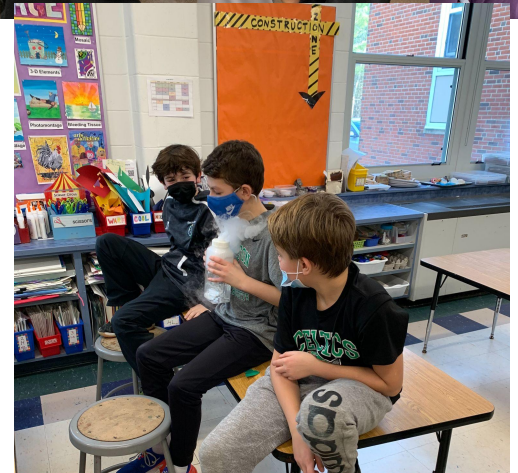

News from 5G (Ms. Gross)

In fifth grade science, students learn about physical changes of matter. As an exciting way to preview the upcoming physical matter unit, we had a special presentation by Mrs. B from the Discovery Museum. She taught vocabulary words such as matter, gas, liquid, solid, melting, freezing, evaporation, condensation, and sublimation. Mrs. B demonstrated the transitions of water from solid to liquid to gas. The highlights of her presentation were the dry ice and liquid nitrogen! Students were able to pour and hold the evaporated dry ice as it reached its sublimation point. We watched as Mrs. B froze and shattered a carnation and banana after dipping them into liquid nitrogen, and heard a hammer constrict as it made contact with the freezing items. We had the best time learning about the physical changes of matter!
